AN "EFFICIENCY" BARN

Chas. W. Nebergall, R. F. D. No. 2, Davenport, Iowa, has a novelty in barns which promises to be extensively copied. The new structure is circular and is fifty-six feet in diameter. By moving less than three feet, Mr. Nebergall can feed a whole barnful of cows and horses. The stable is divided in the center, on one side being stalls for cows and the other for horses. The granary and corn cribs are above with openings to each stall. In the thirty-seven foot loft is the hay. Around the edge of the loft runs a steel carrier. Hay is picked up automatically by the big fork and dumped wherever the manipulator wishes to have it deposited. On the first floor another steel carrier extends around the building at the rear of the stalls to gather up the refuse and carry it outside, without any effort expended by the manipulator. The first floor is of concrete and the surroundings are as near sanitary as is possible to make a barn.

WANTED—Young or middle aged man to assume charge of a distributing center in this district for a responsible concern manufacturing a large line of household commodities. Good position. Reference and horse and wagon required. Apply at once by letter. E. W. Sipp, Salesmanager, Canton, Ohio.
